When it comes to making sandwiches, everyone is a pro. Take some bread, insert your favorite fillings, and boom, a perfect sandwich. Make that same sandwich for friends, and they'll most likely tell you they prefer their own. The simple solution is to let Jeff Flancer take care of that for you. Here's a guy who graduated from the prestigious Culinary Institute of America and turned around to start a sandwich shop. Not a fancy resort dining hall or trendy suit-and-tie restaurant, Flancer's serves down-to-earth good food from a guy behind the counter who can blow any home-schooled sandwich pro out of the water.

Flancer's starts with fresh-baked bread, truly the key to any good sandwich. From there on, it's up to you.

Try roasted turkey breast with green chile mayo and fresh veggies, or go straight for the good stuff and get a vegetarian sandwich. No joke, the veggie sandwich is easily the best in town. All sandwiches are $4.99.

Whatever you get at Flancer's Café will be better than what your friend is making. Maybe even better than your own sandwiches.
